

Michelham Priory Sussex

6th May 2017

This was not an investigation as such but an opinion on a photo that was sent to the group.

The photo was taken within one of the rooms of this 13th century medieval building and of one of the staff that was in period clothing.

DETAIL: We receive weekly possible paranormal photos from our Facebook friends and many do have a natural reason or explanation, but now and again we get one that stands out to be very different.

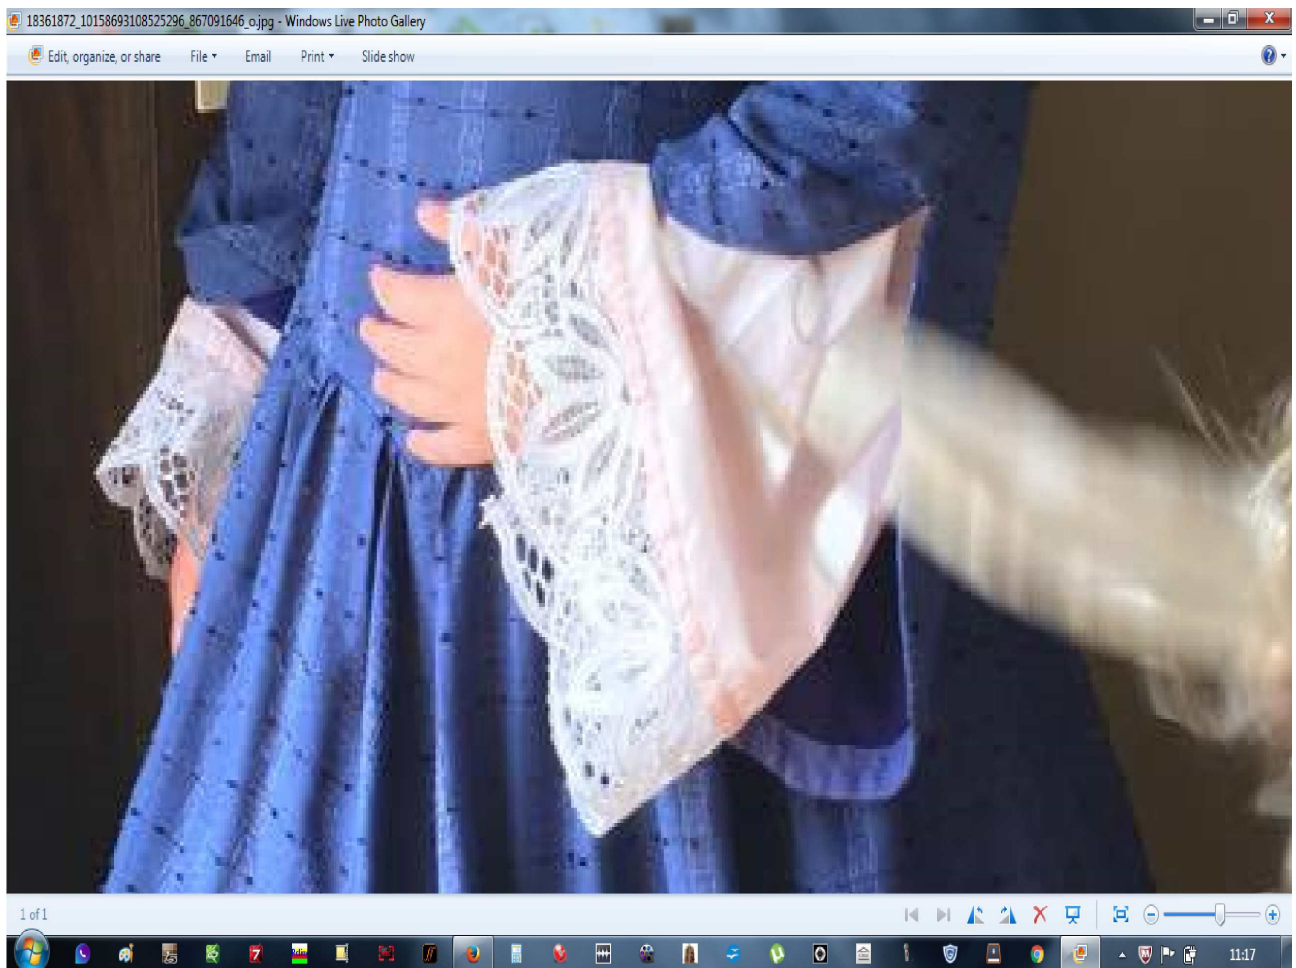

Here we have a photo taken just a few days ago on Saturday 6th May 2017 at Michelham Priory, East Sussex England, and where parts of the building date back to the 13th century. The photo owner and her friend were visiting the site and took the photo of the girl in period clothing. It was only on reviewing that they saw the long mist shape object. The object is mixed in with the child's hair on the right as well as the sleeve of the girl on the left making this impossible to fake and not seen under close examination. On close examination, the object does look like a left arm with a hand trying to hold the girls hand on the left. The device used to photograph this was a standard iPhone SE.

What do you think?. For us, it is 100% genuine and it did pass our test for possible fake with flying colours. A remarkable photo and we are delighted to be the first to view it.

The blown up section of the mist object. No natural reason for this object can be found.

UNEXPLAINED.
